4:00 NEW WATER FOR A THIRSTY WORLD: Michael Salzman, whose book by that title has just been published by the Science Foundation Press in Los Angeles, talks with Gene Marine and Brian Roper about the startling idea that a major source of water in a water-short world is being ignored. In the course of the conversation, the trio cover a dozen scientific disciplines, resurrect an almost-forgotten Nobel Prize nominee, and come up with the location of several of the wells that seem to prove the contentions of the book and the program. A KPFK special.

5:00 TWO OFFBEAT POETS: Herbert Feinstein reads his recent essay describing the "downbeat Jack Kerouac and the upbeat I. A. Richards."

5:30 THE FILM ART: Gideon Bachmann interviews Mary Field, British authority on children's films, on understanding children's reactions and judging "good" films for them. (WBAI)

6:00 PRESS REPORTS FROM INDIA: Paul Wallace.

PROGRAM NOTES: Good news from Sacramento, where two KPFA programs produced during the past year have won awards at the California State Fair. "Black Friday," the program of recordings from the HUAC hearings and the attendant riot that was put on hastily and breathlessly that same night, won a Silver Medal; Dale Minor's dramatization of Kafka's "The Penal Colony" won a Bronze Medal.

In this Folio we complete our "retrospective" of distinguished KPFA programs from past years that have been most often requested for rebroadcast. Included is the talk by S. I. Hayakawa on "How to be Sane Though Negro" that was later published in Contact, the moving talk by Dean Thurman, C. Wright Mills' famous "Decline of the Left," the extraordinary recreation by Haniel Long of the life of Spanish missionaries in colonial America and Elsa Thompson's panel discussions on "The Homosexual in Society" which won an award at last year's State Fair.

An interesting recording from England, not yet available in the U. S., will be heard on September 18: Baldessare Galuppi's three act opera "The Country Philosopher." This work by the prolific but almost-forgotten 18th Century Venetian composer (immortalized in a poem by Browning but not much elsewhere) was revived in 1957 to commemorate the 250th anniversary of its librettist, the great playwright Carlo Goldoni, and since then has been performed throughout Europe. Simplicity and charm are its salient virtues, with a large amount of musical wit to match the gentle satire of its verses.

From the BFA we now have the 1960 Prague Spring Festival; the annual Vienna and Salzburg Festivals will soon be on the way, and BBC discs of this year's Aldeburgh and Edinburgh Festivals are also beginning to arrive at KPFA. From Prague there will be orchestral and choral music performed by major European musicians, including (next Folio) a performance of Berlioz' "Romeo et Juliette." From Vienna there will be a full concert version of Wagner's "Rienzi," an important early opera almost completely forgotten these days. From Aldeburgh, Benjamin Britten's new opera on "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will soon be on our air.

Other prospects: from the BBC, a series of Master Classes conducted by Lotte Lehmann and World Theater productions of plays by Yeats, Turgenev, Jonson and Menander. From UNESCO, new programs for children, a talk by Bertrand Russell, and further folk music from several European countries. From NAEB (National Association of Educational Broadcasters), two children's concerts by the Little Orchestra Society, the annual Couchiching Conference in Canada, which deals this year with Latin American affairs, and a series on religion. And from our own efforts, almost anything.

PARIS, FRANCE (Thursday, September 22, 8:45 P.M.) consists largely of recordings made by Malcolm Bradbury, author and lecturer in adult education at Hull University in northern England, during a visit to America. (Mr. Bradbury also appeared on several KPFA programs during his visit.) He writes in the BBC's Radio Times: "The 'twenties was the great age of American literary expatriation. Young writers, would-be writers, pseudo-writers, too, poured into Paris; they swarmed out of the midwest, or Harvard, rushed through New York and leapt aboard the 'Ile de France,' to the consternation of those who were already there. Who were they? Why did they come? What did they do when they were there? What did they write? What did the period produce? And why, in the end, did they all return to America? These are the questions I wanted to ask. In 1959 I went to the U. S. A. to ask them of some of the most famous surviving expatriates. From their comments emerges what I think is a fascinating account of Paris, France, in the 'twenties." Two of the most eminent members of the group are missing from these recordings. Ernest Hemingway, because he was traveling when they were made, and didn't answer letters. E. E. Cummings, because he doesn't like broadcasting. But most of the others can be heard talking about those years in Paris, which, says Malcolm Bradbury, were obviously fun while they lasted.

proudly presents

by James Forsyth

directed by Leon Forbes

Fridays, Saturdays 8:30 p.m.

the love story of Heloise and Abelard

"Theatre on its highest level." — Brooks Atkinson, N.Y. Times

RESERVATIONS: Penguin Island Bookshop from noon to 11 p.m., EX 7-2481. Also, SU 1-9909. OPENING SOON: Shaw's "The Applecart," a political extravaganza.

WANTED: NEW SOUNDS; KPFA needs new voices, for regular announce shifts, for readings, for dramatic productions, or just for pleasant conversation. Volunteers at KPFA receive considerable training that can be of value in many ways later on. There is a constant need for readers and announcers . . . more now than ever, since we are about to unveil a New Writing Project that will require voices of all types motivated by brains of all sympathies. We would very much like to have a file of tapes, names and addresses of likely sets of vocal chords that would be available regularly or occasionally. Please get in touch with our Production Director, Ernest Lowe, for an audition appointment.
